Dr. Peter Barry, from London

Regiment: -
Rank: -
Prisoner no.: 120

Physician Doctor Barry (also known to the Jacobites as Dr. Moore) was a well known London Jacobite who was concerned in the negotiations before the 1745 Jacobite Rising. He was apparently one of the many Jacobites whose arrest was due to evidence given by Murray of Broughton. All his papers were seized. He was put in Newgate Prison and later in the Tower of London. His name appears among those excepted from the Act of Pardon of June 1747. Being very ill he was sent, in the charge of a Messenger, into the country on 15 August 1747 on bail. His subsequent history is doubtful, but he was released.

LIST OF JACOBITE DOCTORS & SURGEONS IN THE 1745 REBELLION

Dr. John Burton, from York

Regiment: Non Combatant

Rank: -

Prisoner no.: 300

Was in correspondence with Bishop Forbes author of the "Lyon in Mourning". Arrested 30 November 1745, and the same day transferred to York Castle and then sent to London. An enthusiastic Jacobite, he was made prisoner on suspicion of having crossed England with the intention of kissing the Prince's hand. On arriving in London he was sent to a Messengers house and remained in custody until 25 March 1747 when he was released. The Attorney-General had reported on the 15 July 1746 that there was not enough evidence to prosecute him. Released 25 March 1747.

Dr Archibald Cameron, from Inverness-shire

Regiment: Cameron of Lochiel's

Rank: Lieutenant Colonel

Prisoner no.: 333

Brother to Lochiel of the '45. Born 1707, executed 7 June 1753. When the Prince landed in Scotland, Dr. Archibald was sent by his brother to urge him to return to France. He joined the Prince, however, and was in command of a party of Camerons which attempted to capture the Barracks at Ruthven. He was wounded at the battle of Falkirk. After Culloden he was in hiding until the 20 August 1746 when he met the Prince at Loch Arkaig and shared with him the hardship he was undergoing. He left Scotland with the Prince and went to France remaining abroad until 1753, when he returned home thinking there was no danger in doing so. He was, however captured at the house of Glenbuckie, imprisoned in Edinburgh Castle, Tyburn and Tower of London and tried for his life under the old attainder of 1746. He had no trial but was sentenced to death. He was executed on 7 June 1753 and a monument to him, the last victim of the '45, was put up in his memory in the Chapel vault of the old Savoy Chapel, where he is buried. The charge against him appears to have been that he had had blank commissions signed by the Prince to distribute. Sanford Terry says the reason for his execution was 'his implication in the hare-brained Elibank Plot, serious only because of Frederick the Great's suspected connivance'.
